Excellence through Education

A Continuing Medical Education Program
Designed for Medical Professionals

Who Should Attend

This educational activity is designed to address the specific needs, interests and practice gaps of all physicians, physician assistants, nurse practitioners, nurses, pharmacists and any other health care professional as interest dictates.

Needs Assessment and Practice Gap

The Education Committee selected the topic based on needs assessment and practice gaps as identified through past participant request, expert opinion and on the most recent advancements in medicine.

Educational Design

Participants will have the opportunity to attend lectures, participate in pre- and post-lecture quizzes using an audience response system and ask questions of the faculty. A post-activity survey will be emailed six weeks following the symposium.

Learning Objectives

Following the activity, the participant will be able to:

Multidisciplinary Management of Cutaneous Melanoma

1. Describe the initial management of clinically node negative melanoma
2. Discuss the options for management of sentinel node positive melanoma
3. Identify the approved clinical trial treatment options available for advanced melanoma.

Geriatric Assessment in Cancer Care

1. Recognize that older adults are more vulnerable during cancer treatment.
2. Understand how the principles of geriatrics can be incorporated into oncology care of older adults to improve outcomes.
3. Gain insight into the utility of geriatric assessment including its use in predicting chemotherapy toxicity

The Use of Hospice and Palliative Care for Patients At All Stages of Their Cancer Journey

1. Discuss patients that would benefit from primary palliative care in early and late stages
2. Recognize how early palliative care would impact the patient's plan of care throughout the disease process
3. Describe a framework for a meaningful GOC discussion
4. Identify the difference between Palliative Care and Hospice

Surgical Treatment of Breast Cancer in 2020

1. Describe the current surgical approach to breast cancer including management of axillary lymph nodes
2. Apply evidence-based practice strategies for special populations, i.e. older vs. younger women
3. Identify patients at high risk of breast cancer to initiate referral for surveillance, genetic evaluation and surgical consultation
